My Brilliant Friend

THE NEAPOLITAN QUARTET

“The first work worthy of the Nobel prize to have come out of Italy for many decades.”—The Guardian

A modern masterpiece from one of Italy’s most acclaimed authors.

My Brilliant Friend is a rich, intense, and generous-hearted story about two friends, Elena and Lila. Ferrante’s inimitable style lends itself perfectly to a meticulous portrait of these two women that is also the story of a nation and a touching meditation on the nature of friendship. The story begins in the 1950s, in a poor but vibrant neighborhood on the outskirts of Naples. Growing up on these tough streets the two girls learn to rely on each other ahead of anyone or anything else. As they grow, as their paths repeatedly diverge and converge, Elena and Lila remain best friends whose respective destinies are reflected and refracted in the other. They are likewise the embodiments of a nation undergoing momentous change. Through the lives of these two women, Ferrante tells the story of a neighborhood, a city, and a country as it is transformed in ways that, in turn, also transform the relationship between her protagonists, the unforgettable Elena and Lila.

Elena Ferrante is the author of The Days of Abandonment (Europa, 2005), Troubling Love (Europa, 2006), The Lost Daughter (Europa, 2008) and the four volumes of the Neapolitan Quartet (My Brilliant Friend, The Story of a New Name, Those Who Leave and Those Who Stay, and The Story of the Lost Child), published by Europa Editions between 2012 and 2015. She is also the author of a children’s picture book illustrated by Mara Cerri, The Beach at Night, and a work of non-fiction, Frantumaglia: A Writer’s Journey.

Frantumaglia

A WRITER'S JOURNEY

20 years of letters, essays, reflections, and interviews.
 A unique depiction of an author who embodies a consummate passion for writing.

This book invites readers into Elena Ferrante's workshop. It offers a glimpse into the drawers of her writing desk, those drawers from which emerged her three early standalone novels and the four installments of My Brilliant Friend, known in English as the Neapolitan Quartet.

In these pages Ferrante answers many of her readers' questions. She addresses her choice to stand aside and let her books live autonomous lives. She discusses her thoughts and concerns as her novels are being adapted into films. She talks about the challenge of finding concise answers to interview questions. She explains the joys and the struggles of writing, the anguish of composing a story only to discover that the story isn't good enough. She contemplates her relationship with psychoanalysis, with the cities she has lived in, with motherhood, with feminism, and with her childhood as a storehouse for memories, impressions, and fantasies. The result is a vibrant and intimate self-portrait of a writer at work.

“She can talk about politics, history, philosophy, sexuality, loneliness, and I willingly go with her, without ever questioning it. I don't know any [other] writer who can do that for me.”
 —San Francisco Chronicle

Troubling Love

A story about mothers and daughters, and the complicated knot of lies and emotions that binds them.

Following her mother's untimely and mysterious death, Delia embarks on a voyage of discovery through the streets of her native Naples searching for the truth about her family. Reality is buried somewhere in the fertile soil of memory, and Delia is determined to find it. This stylish fiction from the author of My Brilliant Friend is set in a beguiling but often hostile Naples, whose chaotic, suffocating streets become one of the book's central motifs.

The Days of Abandonment

The shocking story of a woman's descent into desperate loneliness.

Rarely have the foundations upon which our ideas of motherhood and womanhood rest been so candidly questioned. This compelling novel tells the story of one woman's headlong descent into what she calls an "absence of sense" after being abandoned by her husband. Olga's "days of abandonment" become a desperate, dangerous freefall into the darkest places of the soul as she roams the empty streets of a city that she has never learned to love. Trapped inside the four walls of her apartment, Olga is forced to confront her ghosts, the potential loss of her own identity, and the possibility that life may never return to normal again.

The Lost Daughter

A riveting story of loss, motherhood, home, and womanhood.

Leda is a middle-aged divorcée devoted to her work as an English teacher and to her two children. When her daughters move to Canada with their father, she feels liberated, as if her life has become lighter, easier. She decides to take a holiday by the sea, in a small town in southern Italy. But after a few days of calm and quiet, things begin to take a menacing turn. Leda encounters a family whose brash presence proves unsettling, at times even threatening. When a small, seemingly meaningless, event occurs, Leda is overwhelmed by memories of the difficult and unconventional choices she made as a mother and their consequences for herself and her family, leading her to a ferocious confrontation with an unsettled past.

The Beach at Night

A short, moving, and mysterious tale for future and present readers of Ferrante's beloved novels.

Left alone on the beach to fend for herself, a doll named Celina is having a terrible night. The Mean Beach Attendant of Sunset is trying to steal all her words, the Fire wants to burn her, and the Sea refuses to answer her prayers. Worst of all, she has been abandoned by her mamma, the little girl Mati, who now has a new kitten to play with. Between one misadventure and another, night turns to day, and when the sun rises Celina will see everything a little more clearly.

Elena Ferrante

Incidental Inventions

Elena Ferrante's weekly Guardian essays, collected together for the first time in a beautiful edition accompanied by an entirely new introduction written by Elena Ferrante and Andrea Ucini's witty illustrations—a must for all Ferrante fans.

After weeks of brilliant, fascinating reflections on life, love, lust, jealousy, creativity, giving us glimpses of Ferrante's inner world, we all wished her Guardian column would never end.

The column was published weekly for one year and was structured with a precise creative methodology: The Guardian would send Ferrante a prompt in the form of a question on any subject, and from that she would let her inspiration flow into the page, almost as a long, inspiring conversation that lasted for an entire year.

An elegant, subtle literary game, with which Ferrante challenged her pen and her mind into a kind of writing she had never experienced before: not digging deep into a story, but scratching the surface of her own relationship with writing and her readers.

Elena Ferrante's new novel

Available in Italy
from November 7.

“ Two years before leaving home my father said to my mother that I was very ugly. The sentence was uttered under his breath, in the apartment that my parents, newly married, had bought in Rione Alto, at the top of Via San Giacomo dei Capri. Everything—the spaces of Naples, the blue light of a very cold February, those words—remained fixed. But I slipped away, and am still slipping away, within these lines that are intended to give me a story, while in fact I am nothing, nothing of my own, nothing that has really begun or really been brought to completion: only a tangled knot, and nobody, not even the one who at this moment is writing, knows if it contains the right thread for a story or is merely a snarled confusion of suffering, without redemption.”

Sacha Naspini

Ossigeno

Paul Auster meets Stephen King in this poetic yet disturbing investigation into the darkest corners of human nature.

Laura disappears on the 12th of August 1999, at eight years old. She is found 14 years later in a bunker. Luca is having dinner with his father, when the police knocks at the door.

What happens if one day you find out the person who raised you is a monster?

Ossigeno is the story of those who stay after everything and everyone else have gone: there are no cages anymore, but the characters are still stuck in their own minds. Luca is captive in his father's DNA, from which there's no escape. His identity is lost: is Luca a monster too, for sharing his father's blood?

Meanwhile, Laura is trying hard to live again. She likes to wander around the city—she likes to get lost in the crowd. But sometimes she feels the need to lock herself in a random bar toilet. She knows someone is watching her.

After the coral, ambitious Le Case del malcontento, Sasha Naspini comes back with a tightly plotted narrative that keeps you at the edge of your seat from page one to the very end, while drawing with sharp sensibility broken characters who fight against all odds to put their pieces back together, ending up in unexpected new cages.

Sacha Naspini

Le Case del malcontento

A psychological masterpiece, an analysis on the complexity of human nature—Le Case is the Italian Spoon River.

In the raw heart of Maremma there's an ancient village, and its name is Le Case. It's a ghost town, a provincial hole that drags you in and keeps you captive, a microcosm of characters dragging themselves in a vortex of dull days—until the community is shaken by the arrival of Samuele Radi, who was born in the village but had managed to escape it. His return is the spark that gives life and fire to this incredible coral novel: the story of a town where everyone lives and dies alone, with their waste, their expectations, their secret passions, their games of love and death.

With a vernacular yet literary language, Sasha Naspini creates a powerful novel, an epic rural tale with a universal echo, mixing noir, psychological thriller, historical memoir and dark fairy-tale.

“One of the best novels of the year. More than twenty characters recount their own story, which can easily become the story of all of us. Plots twist and mix, with loves crushing at their climax and monsters made out of loneliness, a macabre circus with some funny moments. Sasha Naspini successfully wrote a new world.”
—Il Fatto Quotidiano

Sacha Naspini was born in Tuscany in 1976. He's an editor, screenwriter and art director, and author of an extensive backlist: L'ingrato (2006), I sassi (2007), I Cariolanti (2009), Le nostre assenze (2012), Il gran diavolo (2014).

Ahmet Altan

Like a Sword Wound

VOLUME 1 OF THE OTTOMAN QUARTET

A powerful, beautifully written saga set during the fall of one of history's greatest empires.

Altan's "Ottoman Quartet" spans the fifty years between the final decades of the 19th century and the post-WWI rise of Atatürk as both unchallenged leader and visionary reformer of the new Turkey. The four books in the quartet tell the gripping stories of an unforgettable cast of characters, among them: an Ottoman army officer, the Sultan's personal doctor, a scion of the royal house whose Western education brings him into conflict with his family's legacy, and a beguiling Turkish aristocrat who, while fond of her emancipated life in Paris, finds herself drawn to a conservative Muslim spiritual leader.

Intrigue, betrayal, love, war, progress, and tradition provide a colorful backdrop against which the lives of these characters play out. All the while, the society that spawned them is transforming and the Sublime Empire disintegrating.

Here is a Turkish saga reminiscent of War and Peace, written in lively, contemporary prose that traces not only the social currents of the time but also the erotic and emotional lives of its characters. The female characters in Altan's gripping saga will upend prejudices about Turkey, the Middle East, and Muslim nations.

In 2009 he received the Freedom and Future of the Media Prize from the Media Foundation of Sparkasse Leipzig, and in 2011 he was awarded the International Hrant Dink Award. Love in the Days of Rebellion

VOLUME 2 OF THE OTTOMAN QUARTET

A lively fresco of the Ottoman Empire’s crisis at the beginning of XXth century, through the intertwined stories of characters full of life, tormented by love, intrigue, power struggles and revolts.

Hikmet Bey, son of the Sultan’s doctor, is struggling to gain back strength and will to live in a Salonika hospital, as he tries to forget the woman causing his despair, his beautiful and superb wife, Mehpare Hanim. Outside, things are changing in the capital. The Sultan’s power is threatened, the revolt is boiling, Istanbul’s streets become theatre for all kinds of violence.

The reader is transported into an incredible fresco where History is braided by a multitude of perfectly rounded characters. Their loves, hopes, strategies, fragilities make this novel a magnificent story of love and adventure, the compelling chronicle of the end of an empire. A story that is strikingly relevant today: one hundred years from these events, contemporary Turkey still struggles with the consequences of that period, which shows in the novel its indelible mark.

Corpo a corpo

An extremely lonely forty-something years old decides to have a baby, and she does it in the most solitary way possible—online.

One night, Bea goes to the online sperm bank and buys the sperm equivalent of a Ferrari: fast, excellent, well-constructed. She will get pregnant by mail, a practical method with no contraindications. Unfortunately, the result of that delicate online shopping experience is disappointing, and non-returnable. The Body.

The Body doesn't look like his mother's expectations—although his genes were carefully selected. The woman finds herself forced to learn how to love him, an exhausting experience as The Body does nothing to meet her half-way in her attempt to forget all about herself.

Luckily, another woman enters the scene, chosen after long consideration between many candidates from all over the world to be the perfect nanny for The Body. Elsa is Eritrean and couldn't be more different from Bea: their relationship is a constant clash of civilisation in the kitchen, with a surprising sense of sisterhood when it comes to taking care of "their" son, Arturo. A sisterhood that collapses when Bea realizes Arturo is more Elsa's son than her own . . .

Silvia Ranfagni teaches Screenwriting and Creative Writing at Rome University of Fine Arts, and has written screenplays for cinema and articles for Il Venerdì di Repubblica and Micromega. Being a woman and a mammal, she also produced life—an exhausting experience.

Maurizio Fiorino

Ora che sono Nato

The journey of a boy coming to terms with his sexuality in the most challenging circumstances.

His mother: neurotic, egocentric, takes up all the oxygen in the room. His father: egomaniac, unbelievably superstitious.

His sister: a pathological liar verging on delusion. His brother: the first bully in history with a stutter. And then there’s him, Nato, the youngest brother in the Goldino family: he just wants to be a Spice Girl.

On the background of a savage small town in the very South of Italy, he tells us the improbable stories that marked his own childhood and teenagerhood during the Nineties—the stories of a boy who has always felt different from his family and has tried and tried again to escape his surroundings.

Ruthless and moving, fearlessly walking on the line between comedy and tragedy, Ora che sono Nato is the diary of a sentimental (dis)education, a journey that from the bottom of our soul takes us to the most surprising, and never easy, declaration of love: the one we feel for ourselves and our own freedom.

Maurizio Fiorino was born in Crotona in 1984. After an intense childhood in Calabria and studying in Bologna, he moved to New York where he attended the International Center of Photography. Since then, he has been working as a photographer between the States and Italy. He worked with Annie Leibovitz and many international magazines, including GQ Magazine. In 2014 Gallucci published his debut, Amodio, which received praise from critics and public alike. Two years later Fondo Gesù, a short novel, was published again by Gallucci.

Laura Mancini

Pneuma

An extraordinary debut, the story of a woman who fights through life like a gladiator in post-WWII Rome.

It's 1943—families are crowded and hungry. Tullia and her brothers are raised as slaves by their violent, furiously unhappy mother. Every evening she counts the money they were able to raise from the streets, and if it's not enough, she beats them. Tullia is forced to grow up pretty fast, to work with her head down. But the way she sees the world is brave, curious, full of life.

Her desperate will to survive, to make something different out of the misery of her life, is so powerful it's impossible not to remain in awe of her strength, her dignity, her relentless resilience. She leaves behind her abusive mother, but her majestic figure, her beauty, her clear intelligence, torment her as she becomes a woman and a mother, without ever learning how to be a daughter.

She is lonely, but she's not alone: fascinating, dirty, loud, hopeful, eternal Rome is a mother and a friend to Tullia who grows in its warm yet unforgiving embrace.

Laura Mancini's writing is transparent and imaginative, atmospheric. Reading Pneuma is like watching history go by outside a window: it's impossible not to see in it a blurred reflection of ourselves.

Laura Mancini (Rome, 1985) works as a conceptual research consultant for a luxury fashion brand. Pneuma is her first novel.

Stories that will steal a laugh to keep you from crying, to be passed from generation to generation, from a grandfather to a niece, in the hope that his drowning words won’t be lost.

A tender, surprising language that never turns into technicism, but that always shines the beauty of landscapes and people—the tale of History seen from the back row, through the eyes of the defeated. With elegant humour and dark shades, but gently.

A sandstone hill: the first height you meet when you drive down Po valley, 60 km before Conero Mount, on the Adriatic coast. One side, facing north-east, is exposed to the difficult winds of mistral, bora, greek and easterly; the other, facing south-west, blessed by the sun and history. A small world, just a few square kilometres—the Adriatic sea on one side, the depth of the Appennino on the other—cultivated in sharecropping, full of characters, heavy with love, anger and injustice.

Caterina Emili

La scimmia e il caporale

After Il volo dell'eremita and L'innocenza di Tommasina, Vittore Guerrieri finds himself in the middle of a murder mystery that hides much more than what it seems.

Vittore Guerrieri is not a detective: he travels through Italy with his van to sell olive oil and wine. After years of living on the edge, he doesn't look for trouble anymore—but trouble always finds him. He thought he had finally found some peace in Ceglie Messapica, a town in a countryside full of olive trees—but he ends up in the heart of caporalato: a toxic, broken system of exploitation where men and women coming from Africa and Eastern Europe are enslaved and forced to work all day in the tomato fields of sunny and thirsty Puglia.

Behind the novel there is a thorough research on real trials and investigations done in the region. Vittore Guerrieri is the perfect anti-hero for this story: compassionate, flawed, he falls in love with a gypsy who almost breaks his spirit—but his thirst for justice takes him to unravel one of the most vicious and bleak realities of Southern Italy: the investigation on the murder of Katerina forces him to choose between his emotions and his morals.

Caterina Emili is a journalist, a special envoy for various national newspapers and an author and presenter of radio programs on Rai networks. Born in Rome, she divides her time between Umbria and Puglia. Her debut novel L'autista delle slot was published by Besa and won the Premio della critica Città di Cattolica. Vittore Guerrieri lives between Puglia and Umbria, selling olive oil, cheese and wine on a van. He's addicted to gambling and his life is constantly out of control.

His only relative is a cousin who lives as an hermit in a cave, prisoner of his own obsession with God. He has a secret—a dark, shocking secret Vittore will dig out under cryptical biblical quotes, in a crescendo that will annihilate the reader, who'll be put in front of a moral dilemma between justice and revenge.

Patrizia Rinaldi

La danza dei veleni

A unique detective, fast-paced, perfectly plotted narrative, and sophisticated writing: the ingredients of a brilliant noir series which will soon be on tv.

Detective Blanca and her colleagues find themselves facing two apparently disconnected cases: on one side, illegal animal trafficking; on the other, the death of a woman bitten by a rare and lethal spider. It's a difficult puzzle to put together, especially as personal circumstances in the police station create walls between the detectives. A love triangle between Blanca and two of her colleagues makes communication impossible and the case becomes more and more blurred.

Blanca uses her blindness as a strength: her incredible intuition, and her sensitivity to sounds, perfumes, and the 'presence' of people, guide her through this chaotic investigation.

Set in a slow, atmospheric Naples, La danza dei veleni is a perfectly constructed noir: realistic, charismatic, extremely entertaining.

“Patrizia Rinaldi infuses noir plots with social justice, Comedy of Art, sentimental drama, giving the reader a dense, emotional writing to describe the harm of touching the evil.”

Fabio Bartolomei

We Are Family

How to save the world, one family at a time.

Al Santamaria is a child prodigy, maybe a genius. It is not out of the realm of possibility that he, alone, will save the human race. But first, he has to solve a far more urgent problem: finding a home for his family.

He exists in a realm located somewhere between reality and fantasy, enjoying time with imaginary friends and wielding his magical powers. He has a wonderful relationship with his parents and he's convinced he has the best family in the world.

But life isn't all roses for the Santamaria family. As many Italian families today, their existences seem suspended between conflicting impulses: on the one hand, delusions of grandeur and immoderate ambition, and on the other nostalgia for a past golden age and the secret wish that somebody, anybody, will come to their rescue. Big dreams, it appears, exist to be crushed.

But Al is not about to give up. He has the energy, imagination, and unselfconscious talents of a child. And, although he doesn't know it yet, he is going to remain a child his entire life.

Fabio Bartolomei was born and lives in Rome. He's a writer and screenwriter. His first novel and English language debut was Alfa Romeo 1300 and Other Miracles (Europa, 2012) and with We Are Family he won the Elle Magazine Readers' Grand Prize. He teaches creative writing.

L'ultima volta che siamo stati bambini

You need to be a fool to rebel against the laws of war. Or a kid.

A powerful, emotional novel, with contagiously sparkling characters that will live in the heart of readers long after the last page.

Cosimo, Italo and Vanda are barely ten years old, with their dreams, wanderlust and carefree innocence strained by World War II. While the entire country is struggling to survive, the children, after the disappearance of a friend, have no doubts about what is needed to be done: a rescue mission.

Their escape leads to a second, desperate mission, one that includes a nun and a convalescent soldier who immediately run after them. The hope of catching up with the runaway children in a few hours ends up being an unforgivable mistake.

Equipped with childhood's quintessential carelessness, a friendship that gets stronger every day, and a mysterious map, Cosimo, Italo and Vanda take their mission forward with determination, between reckless adventures and a longing for freedom they will pay at the highest price.

Elena Ferrante's Key Words

Keywords to find your way in the labyrinth of My Brilliant Friend's Naples, of a universal story about human chemistry and the loneliness of destiny.

“The real mystery isn’t who Elena Ferrante is, or why she decided to hide behind a pseudonym. The real mystery is how did she managed to change Italian literature without even existing. How did she manage to turn Naples and Italy into a repertoire of stories about the contemporary world, a classic of our times. What is the real cause of this fever that hit more than seven million people all over the world? [. . .]

[Tiziana de Rogatis] moves between the pages analysing the language, the neologisms, the voices, the tones, she undresses the symmetry in the structure and the characters’ incoherence, the mirroring and turning of the genres, she categorises the themes and gives them all back to the reader through key words. She calls them ‘light signals’, that summarise the multi shaped aspects of her writing, the core of her speech, the recurring images that lead all her protagonists to the same account of female subjectivity.”

—La Repubblica

Tiziana de Rogatis is a professor of Contemporary Italian Literature at the University of Siena, where she currently teaches Comparative Literature. Most recently, she focused her analysis on Women’s Studies. She wrote various essays on Elena Ferrante, and she was invited to hold classes in Italy, England, Holland, Sweden and China.

“Maybe what we all need is for the contemporary, daily archetype of society and gender to develop not from philosophy or non-fiction, but from a story. And maybe what we all need in the end is for this story to be based on a human experience that is universally lived and felt, a fact finally visible in literature and in our imagination: the friendship between two women.”

Massimo Cuomo Beautiful

A magical story of love and rivalry between two brothers.

Miguel is beautiful, in a rare, almost miraculous way, that since he was born stirs a passionate obsession amongst the citizens of his town.

His older brother, Santiago, witnesses in awe and fear the extreme reactions that Miguel’s beauty causes in his parents, in people walking by, in the neighbours sitting in their courtyard, in the adoring admirers that hit on him everywhere. Santiago loves his brother, but he ends up becoming his shadow. As Miguel always steals the spotlight, Santiago lives in the dark, hidden corners. All the women look at his brother, his beauty eclipses his own personality. But life makes you pay the price in unexpected ways, and even Miguel will need to learn the hard way how to be in the world.

Set in Mexico, on the background of magical realism, the events seem to shine in a mystical, legendary light. The story follows the conflicts between the two brothers, their parents, their lovers, the citizens of their town, with incredibly realistic psychological depth—everyone was touched and changed forever by his beauty.

Massimo Cuomo was born in Venice in 1974 and lives in Portogruaro. His debut novel Malcom was published in 2011 by Edizioni E/O. In 2014 Piccola osteria senza parole was published.

Massimo Carlotto

Blues for Outlaw Hearts and Old Whores

THE ALLIGATOR SERIES

Once again Good and Bad, masqued and hard to recognize, clash in the international arena of great top secret police operations, drug smuggling, prostitution and identity.

With a tight plot, precise as a Swiss watch, well-rounded characters dangling on hazy roads with no return, sharp irony and sincere humanity, Carlotto delivers a magnetic noir on the never-ending conflict between criminality and police force, where more often than not the victims are civils.

Blues per cuori fuorilegge e vecchie puttane sees the crossover of two of the most popular characters in Carlotto's novels: Marco Buratti, aka the Alligator, and Giorgio Pellegrini, infamous anti-hero of The Goodbye Kiss and At The End of a Dull Day.

Pellegrini, tired of his life on the run, starts cooperating with the police as an undercover—but something goes very wrong and a group of sicarios are sent to kill his wife and his lover. The investigation is given to the Alligator and his team, who find themselves stuck in a game of corruption and spionage that has them fighting for their own lives. And Marco has a lot to lose now, since he has fallen in love with a prostitute called Edith...

More in the Alligator series. Soon to be a TV show

“Carlotto’s taut, broody Mediterranean noir is filled with blind corners and savage set pieces. Pellegrini’s deeds are unquestionably loathsome, but his witty Machiavellian perspective, amplified by a class rage well attuned to the current Italian zeitgeist, makes you root for him all the same.”

—The New Yorker

“Carlotto has written his hardest novel, the most simenonian in the exploration of women’s feelings and pain. The ending cannot be revealed, but it’s safe to say that the final twist is a punch in the gut. The last scene is unforgettable.”

—Corriere della Sera

Massimo Carlotto was born in Padua, Italy. In addition to the many titles in his extremely popular “Alligator” series, he is also the author of The Fugitive, Death’s Dark Abyss, Poisonville, Bandit Love, and At the End of a Dull Day. One of Italy’s most popular authors and a major exponent of the Mediterranean Noir novel, Carlotto has been compared with many of the most important American hardboiled crime writers.

Amara Lakhous

Clash of Civilizations Over an Elevator in Piazza Vittorio

A bittersweet comedy, told with affection and sensitivity, about the social reality of prejudice and racism in Italy—an exact anthropological analysis that is more relevant than ever.

A small culturally mixed community living in an apartment building in the center of Rome is thrown into disarray when one of the neighbors is murdered. An investigation ensues and as each of the victim's neighbors is questioned, the reader is offered an all-access pass into the most colorful neighborhood in contemporary Rome. Each character takes his or her turn center-stage, "giving evidence," recounting his or her story—the dramas of emigration, the daily equivocations of immigration, the fears and misunderstandings of a life spent on society's margins, abused by mainstream culture's fears and indifference, preconceptions and insensitivity. What emerges is a touching story that is common to us all, whether we live in Rome or in Los Angeles.

This novel is animated by a style that is as colorful as the neighborhood it describes and is characterized by seemingly effortless equivoque that borrows from the cinematic tradition of the Commedia Italiana, as exemplified by directors such as Federico Fellini and Mario Monicelli.

“The author’s real subject is the heave and crush of modern, polyglot Rome, and he renders the jabs of everyday speech with such precision that the novel feels exclaimed rather than written.”

—The New Yorker

“Intriguing psychological and social insight alongside a playful whodunit plot, exposing the power of fear, racial prejudice and cultural misconception to rob a neighborhood of its humanity.”

—Publishers Weekly

“The rich variety of characters and psychological understanding place Mr. Lakhous in the tradition of Balzac and Dickens.”

—The Washington Times

“An Italian noir-comedy-satire, written by an Algerian, that effectively breaks rules and has a good time doing it.”

—Shelf Awareness

“The murder in Amara Lakhous’ wonderfully offbeat novel [. . .] is just an excuse to let Algiers-born Lakhous portray a vibrant, multiethnic neighborhood through the voices of characters being interviewed about the death.”

—Seattle Times

Amara Lakhous was born in Algiers in 1970. He has a degree in philosophy from the University of Algiers and another in cultural anthropology from the University la Sapienza, Rome. He recently completed a Ph.D. thesis entitled “Living Islam as a Minority.” His first novel, Le cimici e il pirata (Bedbugs and the Pirate), was published in 1999. Clash of Civilizations Over an Elevator in Piazza Vittorio, winner of Italy’s prestigious Flaiano prize, is his second novel. Inspector Biagio Mazzeo is the head of a special unit trained in investigating against organized crime. He is a kind of father figure to these hard men and he often leads them well beyond the confines of what is legal. But now they've been found out.

In order to save his men from being smeared in a corruption scandal, Mazzeo sacrifices himself and ends up in jail. His sacrifice, however, isn't enough to get his men out of trouble: they have messed around with the wrong drug cartel, for these are no ordinary criminals, this is the 'Ndrangheta, the infamous Calabrian mafia that is known to stop at nothing to get what's theirs.

From behind bars Mazzeo has only one way of helping his men: making a deal with a young female police officer who promises he will be released and all charges will be dropped if Mazzeo embarks on a suicide mission to put an end to an underworld war. In a gripping crescendo of violence, vendettas and corruption, Biagio Mazzeo has to choose sides because this time it's not just his badge that is one the line, but his life.

Giorgia Lepore

Il compimento è la pioggia

After I figli sono pezzi di cuore and Angelo che sei il mio custode Lepore comes back with another story of violated childhood—a childhood that Gerri has to rebuild, fishing it somewhere in his lost memories.

In the night of Saint Nicholas, in Bari, a terrible murder was committed. In a small house in the historical centre of the city, a twenty years old was found dead. Her body is traumatised with bruises and cuts, and around her there are traces that hint a baby was there: toys, biberon, clothes. But no baby to be found.

Inspector Gerri Esposito walks into the murder scene, followed by his boss, Marinetti, and inspector Sara Coen, with whom Gerri has a complicated relationship. The investigation opens up in the matter of a few days—cold days, when Puglia witnesses the rare sight of snow, and after that, rain.

“Giorgia Lepore digs deep into your soul through her words. This story is a magnificent—and terrifying—heartbeat . . .”
—Donato Carrisi

Giorgia Lepore is an archeologist and art historian, she lives in Martina Franca and teaches Art History. She wrote L'abitudine al sangue (Fazi 2009), I figli sono pezzi di cuore (E/O 2015) e Angelo che sei il mio custode (E/O, Sabot/age 2016).

Christopher Prendergast, Living and Dying with Proust

The culmination of a lifetime's exploration of Marcel Proust's great work, Christopher Prendergast's Living and Dying with Proust is a dazzling, sometimes personal, account of what it means to be alive in Proust's world, which—this being Proust—naturally also means what it is like to be ill, to age and to approach death. The book consists of around 18 short chapters on a range of topics that relate in one way or another to the title.

Christopher Prendergast is the General Editor of the Penguin Modern Classics edition of Marcel Proust's In Search of Lost Time. He is a Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

Stefania Nardini, La superstite

After her husband dies, Angelita loses herself in a labyrinth of grief and memories. Embarking in a psychoanalytical journey through the life she shared with her husband, the woman becomes a mirror of their past: working-class Rome, the student revolts, the dark period of terror known in Italy as 'anni di piombo', the militancy in the Communist Party. How did they get to the comfortable, middle-class life they ended up living? An evocative, historical, touching psychological novel of a woman who fights against grief to re-establish a relationship with herself, and to rediscover her identity as a person who's alone, but not lonely. A survival, but not shipwrecked.

Patrizia De Luca, Tettagna

A black fairy-tale that blends light irony with the ancestral firmness of women's strength. Three generations of women share their experience and grief, trying to overcome their constant sense of guilt, reflecting on the profound sense of female friendship and solidarity. Their stories evolve around an eternally ambiguous tie: the fear of resembling our own mothers, and the desire of living our dreams through our daughters.

Tettagna is a hill in the Neapolitan countryside. At its feet, only women are born. Time leaves marks on their faces, but their breasts always keep the gentle shape of Tettagna's hill. Their breasts have a mysterious power: they can kill the man who sees them, if his love is not reciprocated.
